A page is turned, a lesson starts,
With quiet questions, restless hearts;
We read, we try, we fall, we rise,
And see the world through wiser eyes.

Some lessons come with joy and pain,
Some leave a mark we can't explain;
A wrong we made, a truth we knew,
Can teach us things no book can do.

The bell may ring, the school day ends,
But learning follows where life bends;
For every road we choose to take
Becomes another lesson we make.

So leave a page for dreams to grow,
For there are things we still don't know;
And though today's chapter may be through,
Tomorrow is with something new.
